How to write compelling copy that generates sales.

No report like this one would be complete if I didn't show you how to craft messages that generate sales. Now, with the creation of AI, you, too, can craft successful copy just like I have done in this report.

Yes, I used AI and then added my tweaks and style. AI is not perfect, but it is a great base to start with, and over time, it will help you become a much better copywriter.

The AI software I use is CHAT GPT.

To use AI successfully, you need to use prompts.

A prompt is where you tell AI what you want it to do.

Here are some example prompts.

After each prompt, you enter your current sales copy so AI can rewrite it for you. Then, you take what AI has written and modify it to suit your style and way of speaking.

PROMPT IDEAS

Prompt: Write an easy-to-read direct sales paragraph about (topic) for (target audience).

Prompt: Write an easy-to-read direct sales email subject line about (topic) for (target audience).

Prompt: Write an easy-to-read direct sales headline about (topic) for (target audience).

Prompt: Create three paragraphs of compelling advertising copy for email marketing on (topic) for (target audience).

Prompt: Write an easy-to-read 450-word article about the benefits of (topic) for (target audience).

Prompt: Create a compelling sales letter about (topic) for (target audience).

Prompt: Write six compelling autoresponder emails to get (target audience) to purchase our (product or service).

Prompt: Create a compelling script for a 30-second video about (topic).

The more detailed your prompts are, the more accurate your results will be. See more examples below.

Prompt: Create seven attention-getting email subject lines about (product or service) aimed at small business owners.

Prompt: Draft a personalized email template to re-engage subscribers who haven't opened your emails in the past 90 days.

Prompt: Create a step-by-step email marketing campaign plan for promoting a seasonal sale, including subject lines, timing, and follow-up emails.

Prompt: Design a drip email campaign to nurture leads for a small business selling physical products over time.

Prompt: Create an email marketing checklist to help small business marketers prepare and send high-converting email campaigns.

Prompt: Write a compelling 7-page report that shows readers where they can get free website traffic.

Prompt: Write a compelling 450-word blog post about the benefits of (topic) for (target audience).

Let me show you what can happen with a good AI prompt.

Prompt: Write six emails for an autoresponder encouraging subscribers to buy a product or service.

RESULTS:

Here are six emails designed to engage subscribers, build trust, and drive purchases. The emails follow the classic "Problem-Agitation-Solution" and "Know-Like-Trust" frameworks.

Throughout these emails, you will see comments in brackets like - [solve a problem or achieve a goal], [specific desired outcome], [products/services], [teaser], [specific benefit], [specific pain point], and so on. You need to fill these in with your information about the product or service you are promoting.

Keep your emails short and to the point. People do not have the time to read long emails. Emails should be just long enough to tell the story.
